WHO IS MR. OSMIUM?

Ingo Wolf, named Germany’s “most valuable #2”, is a man of many titles: Munich-based entrepreneur, lead investor in the electric car startup Rimac Automobili, and now, a mentor to the next generation of innovators. His journey to success began in the early 1990s, when he co-founded the clothing line Trigema, which he later sold to Adidas for a record-breaking $1 billion.

Ingo’s passion for innovation and technology is evident in his investment in Rimac Automobili, a company that produces electric supercars. He recently visited Rimac’s factory in Croatia, and was impressed by the company’s commitment to sustainability and innovation. He believes that the electric car industry is at a turning point, and that Rimac has the potential to be a leader in this new era of transportation.

In his spare time, Ingo enjoys golfing and spending time with his family. He is married to Osmium, and has three children. He lives in Munich with his family, and is a proud member of the city’s business community.

Ingo’s success in business and his passion for innovation have made him a respected figure in the German business world. He is a mentor to many young entrepreneurs, and is a frequent speaker at business conferences around the world. He is also a strong advocate for sustainability, and works to promote environmentally-friendly practices in all aspects of his business.

Ingo Wolf’s unique combination of business acumen and entrepreneurial spirit has made him a role model for many aspiring business leaders. His story is one of hard work, innovation, and success, and he continues to inspire others to follow in his footsteps.
